ORIGINAL REPORT

C. 19 y.o, Libya

On the 1st of October he had been to Croatia, reached Zagreb and started to walk in the forest. At 8 in the morning he swam to cross the border between Croatia and Slovenia. He did cross the border, passed a first village. The police caught him and beat him : in the face, especially in the nose, he was also slapped and punched. He was brought to police station and slept there, without food nor water. Then he was transferred to Croatian police. He spent his day there in a cell. Around 8:30 he was brought back to Serbia, alone in a van with 3 policemen, at Tovarnik's trainstation. He declares he didn't have any occasion to ask for asylum, being beaten at the first contact with the police. In Slovenia the police made him sign a few papers that were not written in a language he understands :
