He was deported back to Serbia on the 4 th of September. The Croatian police caught him in Rijeka at 2 in the morning, and brought him directly to Zagreb police station where he stayed in a room during 4 hours, able to use his phone. He contacted by whatsapp a person from UNHCR that didn't answer. He was told that asylum in Croatia was not possible. The Croatian police then brought him back to Serbia in a van, where he was alone. They dropped him at the railway at the border. He didn't experience any kind of physical violence. It was the 7 th time he tried to cross.
