The police asked their nationalities and checked their bodies and belongings, and the men expressed their intention to seek for asylum. After that the police committed the violence. All the police surrounded the men and let their 3 police dogs with masks to hit the men with head and scratch them with nails to all body parts. Then 2-3 of them treated the men one by one with violence. The police beat with stick (long thin black with armrest) and kick to all body parts, and used also tear gas spray to eyes and mouth of the men. The violence lasted about 15 min per each of the men. Then the men were transported by big police van to police station nearby about 20 min car drive away. There the men were one by one interrogated while the others stayed in big cold hall. The men again expressed their intention to seek for asylum. The police asked the men to fill in a form with their identity details and information about the route and destination of the men, but no fingerprints or pictures were taken. The men asked for water and food, but the police didn't give any. After about 5 h at the police station, the men were transported by big police van about 2 h drive to the Serbian-Hungarian border near Subotica Serbia (coordinates: 46.155192, 19,733502).
